

As last reported, 108 suitors from four islands, with [[people/antinous]] at their head. These are group counts by home island; the named men have their own records. The ledger is [[ithaca/suitors/roster]].

| HOME ISLAND | SUITORS |
|-------------|---------|
| Dulichium   | 52      |
| Same        | 24      |
| Zacynthus   | 20      |
| Ithaca      | 12      |
| Total       | 108     |

SUPPORTING FILES

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |   |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---|
|  ithaca/suitors/roster.md                                                                                                         | > |
| 108 men from four islands: 52 Dulichium, 24 Same, 20 Zacynthus, 12 Ithaca. Plus their retinue.                                                                                                                                     |   |
|  ithaca/suitors/dulichium.md                                                                                                      | > |
| Fifty-two young men from Dulichium, the largest party in the hall, with six serving-men.                                                                                                                                           |   |
| ithaca/suitors/same.md                                                                                                                                                                                             |   |
|  Twenty-four men from Same, the island across the narrow strait. Asteris, where the ambush ship waits, lies between us.                         | > |
| ithaca/suitors/zacynthus.md                                                                                                                                                                                        |   |
|  Twenty men from wooded Zacynthus, the furthest of the four islands from the hall.                                                              | > |
| ithaca/suitors/ithacans.md                                                                                                                                                                                         |   |
|  Twelve men of our own island, from its best houses. Antinous is one of them. They grew up within sight of the hall.                            | > |
| ithaca/suitors/retinue.md                                                                                                                                                                                          |   |
|  Six serving-men from Dulichium, two carvers, the herald and the singer. Some brought, some compelled.                                          | > |
| ithaca/suitors/their-case.md                                                                                                                                                                                       |   |
|  What they say they want and why they say they are entitled to it, as reported from the assembly. Written as they would put it, not as I would. | > |
| ithaca/suitors/ambush-ship.md                                                                                                                                                                                      |   |
|  Twenty men in a fast ship, waiting at Asteris in the strait between Ithaca and Same, to take Telemachus on his way home.                       | > |