7 journal entries since day 3645: the hawk, Hermes and the oath, the four days of the build, and the eagle. Read them in order from [[journal/day-3645]].

Day 3645 — No further report. If the wind held he has been at Pylos two days. Worked the passage out twice and went up the headland.

Day 3646 — Two reports: my son is safe at Pylos and gone on to Sparta, and the suitors have a ship waiting in the strait to kill him on his way home.

Day 3647 — Hermes came with Zeus's order. She is to let me go. I made her swear she means no harm by it, and she did.

Day 3648 — First build day. She brought a bronze axe and showed me the trees I have been counting for seven years. Twenty down.

Day 3649 — Second build day. Squared the timbers, bored them with her augers and fitted them together with pegs and joints.

Day 3650 — Third build day: ribs, deck and bulwarks. Seven years on the island today, and I spent it on a deck.

Day 3651 — Fourth build day: mast, yard and sail, the rigging and the levers to launch her. And a report of an eagle over my courtyard.
